Childhood during the 1930s

These years were difficult for many Canadian families, as they had to adapt to changes brought on by the Depression (the global economic crisis during the 1930s which was an economic and social shock that left millions of people in need and without employment or shelter). Children were also affected. Their lives were very different from the lives of young people today.

How has life changed for children?

Activity! Match the historical photos from the 1930s with the drawings representing life today for most children.
